WELCOME BACK!

*Apologies for the delay amigos and amigas. Due to a few nasty site bugs, we've had to wait a week longer than usual to deliver you the latest on Meadowcroft's happenings. But have no fear, we're back and ready to share. Hope you've had a stellar Easter break, we've missed you guys!

A BRAND NEW CHAPTER!

Here at Meadowcroft, we run a tight ship. Both staff and pupils here like to know what's happening, how it's happening and when it's happening whenever possible; that includes who it's happening with. That's why last week at the Hub presented a particular challenge for our pupils and admittedly all of us: the acceptance of change. Recently, with Meadowcroft expanding and growing as a school, the conduction of interviews has been a reality our students have had to accept. Traditionally, to ensure that we hire the best candidate for any position here, we give our pupils a chance to have an input in the interview process by way of a 'pupil panel'. Composed of some of our finest students, we put a good wealth of our faith in a select few pupils to assess the legitimacy of the candidates on offer: Charlie, the nurturer. Liam, the protector. Alicia, the mother hen. Bailey, the 'top boy' (well, now and then at least).

Thankfully, once again, I'm pleased to say our students exceeded our expectations. Each displayed a level a professionalism and maturity hard to find anywhere, let alone a school. In fact, the least mature presence on the panel was the teaching assistant they had guide their enquiries: Mr Hunter. Unable to restrain himself, he yet again felt the need to ask strangers... "If you had a power, what would it be?"

Unable to hide his outrage over why both candidates he met would answer 'flight' and 'invisibility', he was swiftly de-escalated by the entirety of the pupil panel, as well as urged "to better conduct" himself. So there we have it, it would appear students do become masters after all!

Here's to a brand new chapter!
