

MENTAL HEALTH AWARENESS - ARTICLE

Mental health. An elusive thing. An issue that hides in plain sight, often masked behind frowns, scowls, stoic stares and even smiles. It's easy for us to forget about the internal struggle our peers, colleagues, friends and even loved ones could be facing. So, to us at Meadowcroft, we think it's a phenomenal idea to have a day dedicated to acknowledging, celebrating or remediating each other's feelings. Thursday the 10th of October, we at Meadowcroft celebrated 'Mental Health Awareness' day in a way only Meadowcroft could! See, traditionally, proponents of this occasion often don the colour yellow to project their solidarity for the cause. So, as you might expect, that gave us lot here at Meadowcroft plenty of leeway to play dress-up... Miss Sen got the ball rolling, donning a massive crayon costume (Strong effort).

"THAT'S A
LOTTA
YELLOW!"

Of course, Miss Edwards rocked up in her fan-favourite Bumble Bee outfit... the kids were buzzing (sorry for the pun, couldn't resist). Mr Hinman, regretfully rocking up in plain clothes, without a dash of yellow on his person, was forced to pay the ultimate price (Mrs Edwards leant him a yellow tutu, and it was as magnificent as it sounds). However, it was Mr Hunter who truly stole the show... and for as cheap as £10.99 too (Amazon's got some proper bargains). The outfit in question? Well, what else? A cool banana. Suffice it to say, with a colourful assortment of costumed staff, spirits were high among our pupils... perfectly setting the tone for the academic year to come.
